“ So many memories of Charles... he was my biggest fan and never missed a softball game, first time I ever jumped off the tressel on the river, was with you we held hands and jumped at the same time, you taught me the essentials I needed to even be an adult really, how to change a tire, how to change brakes, how to cook, we used to love cleaning our place together, how to shoot a gun, how to hunt and how to recover the deer once you've shot it and how to gut one (even tho I never did it) I watched you several times. You showed me what real love was, I had never known love until you, you raised the bar on how I should be treated... a true gentleman. The biggest hugs the strongest hands, because of you I got my degree, thank you for helping me study day and night even in the mornings quizzing me while I was in the shower, you showed me how to live, and to live life to the fullest... because of you I am fearless. Thank you for always loving me, and I will always and forever love you.
