“ Well Jr I never in a million years thought this was how we would say see ya later!! Man dude, this thing said share a memory, I can't think of just one...And I cherish each and every one...the last 21 years of friendship has been a journey of adventures, from arguing and screaming at each other to just sitting on the couch talking about everything under the sun!! I love you Jr! I hope you're flying high up there!! Keep that beautiful baby in your arms and shower him in hugs and kisses!! Till we meet again my friend, I love you!!

“ This is going to be one of the hardest days I’ve ever had to get through. So many memories. So many years. All those nights we opened and closed Mr. Ps at such a young age! All the trips we rode our bikes across town to see each other. Our childhood memories were like no other. Twister! Lol. It’s so crazy to think how far we came. I can always say no matter when I needed you, you were there. If I called, you dropped everything. And vice versa. Very few know how close we have always been. But I always knew you had my back from day one. We grew apart, started our own families over the years but one thing remained the same, our friendship. Every holiday or birthday you were the first to send me a message or a video. We could go months without talking and pick right back up where we left off. Sometimes you were my common sense and sometimes I was yours. We both caused pain to one another over the years but we both forgave and accepted each other for where we were in life. I know you’re watching over all your babies and with our tiny Skyla! Please watch over all your family and friends. I don’t think you’ll ever know how important you were to so many. I pray for your parents and the mothers of your babies. A parent shouldn’t have to go through this, my heart aches for them, and all your family. Having to hold your babies when they grieve is something I can’t imagine doing. Please give them all the strength to get through tomorrow and the days following. Please hold ours for me. Until we meet again.... ❤️ ❤️ ❤️
