“ *I keep trying to find words...
Mark was my best friend for a very long time, and also the biggest pain in my ass ever.
I will miss him always, but dang do I have some memories....

Love, hugs and comfort to all the family and the rest of you friends.*

“ In 1986, if you would have told me that my older brother Mark would die of a heart attack at the age of 53, well, I would have laughed at you. 30 years ago, it was apparent to me that my brother would--at a young age--either be shot by a jealous husband or die in a fiery car crash. He cheated death a hundred different ways and always came out without a scratch. Mark loved dancing with skinny women, drinking beer, playing cards, shooting pool, tossing darts, collecting baseball cards, watching great movies, calling into radio talk shows, and rooting for the Cincinnati Reds (actually he enjoyed rooting for almost every Ohio sports team). He loved dogs and his gigantic, overfed goldfish. My brother had no concept of "moderation" and he is the only person that I ever met who truly lived like there was no tomorrow. Mark was also the most stubborn fool that I ever met. He did things his way. If you told him that he could not do something, then he would just have to prove you wrong! RIP brother, it was a wild ride growing up with you.

A Purcell CLASSIC... This photo accurately captures your four (4) true selves in your individual faces. There's just enough of an ornery look in Mark's eyes -- plus a hint of a smirk -- to know he's the real deal. GODSPEED, MARK!
