“ Maly, I'm so sorry for your loss. I worked with Shawn for over thirty years and he was my mentor and friend. He was probably the smartest man I ever known. We kept in touch with our Christmas notes. In his note last year, he shared the extent of his medical problems, but he was still upbeat. I was working on history of signal processing and will miss his constructive comments.

“ Maly, Anna, and Nicholas,
Just saw the obituary notice for Shawn. Sorry for your loss. May all the fond memories over the years give you comfort during this difficult time. I have seen Shawn's wonderful wood working skills at the Apple Butter Festival and marveled at what he could create.

“ I am sorry for your loss, Mary and Anna. I only meet you once, at Shawn's retirement party at Frank's in 2006, but we had a memorable and very enjoyable conversation.

I knew Shawn from the confines of NASIC. I don't know how to describe in words what he meant to us Electronic Warfare (EW) experts...but I can guarantee you he could, as he was a technical writing marvel. As the "Grandfather of EW," his teachings will live on in all of 'EW types' for generations to come.
